

Leveraging Social Media to Grow Your Business.

Twitter...Facebook...YouTube...blogs—Social media is everywhere and we all take part in the growing conversation in one shape or form whether we want to or not. As technology brings the global marketplace within reach of just about everyone, today's businesses are seeing more and more of the value of social media to help reach new markets across the street and around the world. Statistics show, in fact, that a staggering 90% of companies today report that social media is an important tool for growing their customer base—and their bottom line.*

How is your business leveraging the power of social media? How can you increase the potential and reach of the social media tools you already use? Discover how you can do more with social media than ever before with this special business workshop from Xerox.

Sales and Marketing Services

Keep the conversation going to build relationships—and delight more customers.

Building and maintaining business relationships start with communication. This insightful workshop can show you how today's businesses are using modern marketing tools like micro-blogging, blogging, social networking, video distribution, product review websites, customer-driven customer service sites—and more—to share information and content with current and potential customers, whenever and wherever they like.

Change the way you think about communicating using the Print Providers Guide to Social Media.

No matter what the size of your business or your specialty, investing some time to improve your current social media methods or try new ones, can create a better connection with your customers and prospects. The Print Providers Guide to Social Media, your learning tool for this workshop, can show you how.
