US, Canadian Warships Sail Through Taiwan Strait; China Says "Public Hype"

TAIWAN: (AGENCY)

A US destroyer and a Canadian frigate sailed through the Taiwan Strait on Tuesday in the latest joint operation aimed at reinforcing the route's status as an international waterway. Beijing views as its own both democratic Taiwan and the narrow body of water separating the island from mainland China - one of the world's busiest shipping channels. The United States has long used "freedom of navigation" passages through the Taiwan Strait to push back against Chinese claims and Western allies have increasingly joined these operations.

The USS Higgins, an Arleigh Burke-class destroyer, in cooperation with the Royal Canadian Navy's Halifax-class frigate HMCS Vancouver, "conducted a routine Taiwan Strait transit September 20 (local time) in accordance with international law", the US Navy's Seventh Fleet said.

"The ship transited through a corridor in the Strait that is beyond the territorial sea of any coastal State," Canada said. The HMCS Vancouver was en route to join an ongoing mission to enforce UN sanctions against North Korea when it transited with the USS Higgins. "Today's routine Taiwan Strait transit demonstrates our commitment to a free, open and inclusive Indo-Pacific," Canadian Defense Minister Anita Anand said in a statement using another term for the Asia-Pacific region. A spokesman for China's Eastern Theatre Command described the latest transit as "public hype".

The troops are always on high alert, resolutely counteract all threats and provocations, and resolutely defend national sovereignty and territorial integrity," Colonel Shi Yi said, according to Chinese state broadcaster CCTV. British, Canadian, French and Australian warships have made passages through the Taiwan Strait in recent years, sparking protests from Beijing.

They also frequently ply the South China Sea, another vital shipping area that Beijing insists comes under its domain despite a 2016 Hague ruling that dismissed its claims as well as rival ones from multiple neighbours.

The last time US and Canadian warships sailed through the Taiwan Strait was 11 months ago when the destroyer USS Dewey and frigate HMCS Winnipeg made the trip.

The latest joint passage came a day after President Joe Biden again declared that US troops would come to Taiwan's aid in the event of a Chinese invasion.

This was the fourth time Biden made such comments, despite Washington's longstanding official policy of "strategic ambiguity" -- designed both to ward off a Chinese invasion and discourage Taiwan from provoking Beijing by formally declaring independence. He added that few Russians wanted to go to the battlefield. "I still believe Putin isn't insane, there is

Residents In Ukraine's Kyiv Slam Putin's Mobilisation Order As Mark Of Desperation

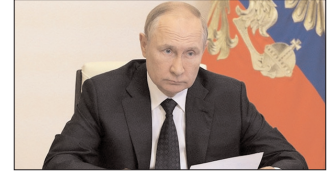

KYIV: (AGENCY)

Residents of the Ukrainian capital Kyiv dismissed on Wednesday Russian President Vladimir Putin's callup of military reservists as a mark of desperation and expressed confidence in their own armed forces to drive Russian troops from their country in the first such mobilisation in Russia since World War Two, Putin called up 300,000 reservists to fight in Ukraine and said Moscow would respond with the might of all its vast arsenal if the West pushed what he called its "nuclear blackmail" over the conflict there.

"The threat would be bigger if there was a general (Russian) mobilisation, but I think at this point Putin is afraid to undertake such a step because Russians prefer to fight with words," said Viktor Chekhin, 46, a geographer who works at the National Academy of Sciences of Ukraine. He added that few Russians wanted to go to the battlefield. "I still believe Putin isn't insane, there is some rationality in him. So if nuclear weapons are used, this could endanger the existence of Russia as well as the whole world."

Another Kiev resident, Oleksandr Sharkin, 31, clutching a bunch of flowers as he walked near the neoclassical opera house, echoed that sentiment.

"If they (the Russians) are forced to fight a war, the motivation of their soldiers will be even lower than that of the contractors," he said. Kyiv and its Western allies have cited Russian soldiers' low morale as one of the reasons for the slow progress of what Moscow calls its "special military operation" in Ukraine. There was strong support among Kyiv residents for Ukraine's own armed forces, who helped by Western arms have been battling Russia's much bigger military for nearly seven months on several fronts and recaptured swathes of land in recent weeks. Russian forces gave up their attempt to seize Kyiv itself in the early days of the war after meeting fierce Ukrainian resistance and turned their focus instead to other regions.

"I think we have to trust our armed forces and no one else. Threats will always come from them (the Russians) while they exist, so there is no point in listening to them or negoti-

Vladimir Putin's Military Call Up Sparks Rush To Buy Flights Out

MOSCOW: (AGENCY)

Flights out of Russia were nearly fully booked this week, airline and travel agent data showed Wednesday, after President Vladimir Putin introduced a partial draft of reservists to fight in Ukraine. Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu said Wednesday that Russia would initially mobilise some 300,000 reservists, after Putin in a televised address warned Russia would use all available military means in Ukraine.

Direct flights to cities in nearby ex-Soviet countries of Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan were all sold out for Wednesday, the Aviasales website popular in Russia showed.

Turkish Airlines meanwhile said on its website that flights to Istanbul, which has become an important travel hub to and from Russia, were fully booked until Saturday.

The next available Air Serbia flight to Belgrade was posted for September

26. Google data showed that searches in Russia for "tickets" and "plane" more than doubled after 0600 GMT Wednesday, the start of Putin's recorded televised address. The request "to leave Russia" was carried out 100 times more in the morning than in normal times, Google Trends data showed.

Flights between Russia and the European Union were announced after Putin called Moscow's "special military operation" in Ukraine.

The onset of fighting sparked concerns among Russians that martial law could be imposed and saw an exodus of tens of thousands of people to countries neighbouring Russia.

230 Pilot Whales Stranded In Australia, "About Half" Feared Dead

SYDNEY: (AGENCY)

A pod of 230 pilot whales was found stranded on the rugged west coast of Tasmania Wednesday, with Australian officials saying only half appeared to be alive. Aerial images showed a devastating scene of dozens of black glossy mammals strewn across a long beach, stuck on the waterline where the frigid southern ocean meets the sand.

Locals covered survivors with blankets and doused them with buckets of water to keep them alive, as other whales nearby tried in vain to twitch free and get more by dead.

The whales were "stranded near Macquarie Harbour" said the state's Department of Natural Resources and Environment. "It appears about half of the animals are alive." Officials said marine conservation experts and staff with whale rescue gear were en route to the scene. They will try to relocate animals that are strong enough to survive and likely tow the carcasses out to sea, to avoid attracting sharks to the area. It is almost two years to the day since Macquarie Harbour was the scene of the country's largest-ever mass stranding, involving almost 500 pilot whales. More than 300 pilot whales died during that stranding, despite the efforts of dozens of volunteers who toiled for days in Tasmania's freezing waters to free them. The cause of mass strandings is still not fully understood. Scientists have suggested they could be caused by pods going off track after feeding too close to shore. Pilot whales -- which can grow to more than six metres (20 feet) long -- are highly sociable and can follow podmates who stray into danger. That sometimes occurs when old sick or injured animals swim ashore and other pod members follow, trying to respond to the trapped whale's distress signals. Other whales gently sloping beaches like those found in Tasmania confuse the whales' sonar making them think they are in open waters. The news came just hours after a dozen young male sperm whales were reported dead in a separate mass stranding on King Island -- between Tasmania and the Australian mainland. The young whales' deaths may be a case of "misadventure", wildlife biologist Kris Carlyn from the state government conservation agency told the local Mercury newspaper. "The most common reason for stranding events is misadventure, they might have been foraging close to shore and there might have been food and possibly they were caught on a low tide," Carlyn said. "That's the theory at the moment." In nearby New Zealand strandings are also common.

There, around 300 animals beach themselves annually, according to official figures and it is not unusual for groups of between 20 and 50 pilot whales to run aground. But numbers can run into the hundreds when a "super pod" is involved -- in 2017, there was a mass stranding of almost 700 pilot whales.

Ukraine Accuses Russia Of Shelling Nuclear Plant Again

KYIV: (AGENCY)

The Ukrainian nuclear operator Energoatom on Wednesday accused Russia of again striking the Zaporizhzhia atomic power plant in southern Ukraine. "Russian terrorists bombed the Zaporizhzhia nuclear power plant again during the night," Energoatom said on Telegram. The strike damaged a power line causing the stoppage of several transformers of the number six reactor of the plant and forcing a brief plant of emergency generators, Energoatom said.

"Even the presence of inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) does not stop the Russians, it said, calling on the agency to "more resolute actions" against Moscow.

Europe's largest atomic facility, located in Russian-held territory in Ukraine, has become a hot spot for concerns after the fact of attacks by Russian troops in March and shelling around the facility has spurred calls from Kyiv and its Western allies to de-militarise areas around nuclear facilities in Ukraine.

Honda Overpaid Staff Bonuses, Now Asks For Full Refund: Report

WASHINGTON: (AGENCY)

Receiving a bonus at work is a wonderful feeling that is expected to significantly improve employees' quality of life. With current inflation levels and an uncertain economy, the impact is likely to be greater, but Honda is in a bind after overpaying bonuses to several employees. The Japanese carmaker recently sent a memo to employees at its Marysville, Ohio, factory informing them that the company had overpaid the bonus amount and asked them to give it back, according to a report in NBCA. It further said that if employees do not respond, the money will be deducted from their pay automatically, the report further said. NBCA reached out to Honda and the company confirmed that it asked employees to repay some of their bonuses and claimed that it was legally justified, but it refused to disclose how much the bonuses were and how much it asked employees to repay. "Earlier this month Honda provided bonus payments to its associates, some of whom received overpayments. Issues related to compensation are a sensitive matter and we are working quickly on this item to minimise any potential impact to our associates."

Russian Opposition Calls For Protest Over Vladimir Putin's Mobilisation Order

TBILISI, GEORGIA: (AGENCY)

Russia's opposition on Wednesday called for protests against President Vladimir Putin after he ordered the mobilisation of 300,000 reservists for what Kremlin foe Alexei Navalny said was a failing criminal war. Putin on Wednesday ordered Russia's first mobilisation since World War Two and backed a plan to annex swathes of Ukraine, warning the West he was not bluffing when he said he would be ready to use nuclear weapons to defend Russia. Navalny, Russia's most prominent opposition leader who is currently in prison, said Putin was sending more Russians to their death for a failing war. "It is clear that the criminal war is getting worse, deepening, and Putin is trying to involve as many people as possible."

The Controversy Over Japan Ex-PM Shinzo Abe's State Funeral

TOKYO: (AGENCY)

A state funeral for assassinated former prime minister Shinzo Abe has become a lightning rod for controversy, prompting demonstrations and even a man apparently setting himself on fire. But why has the September 27 funeral become such a hot-button issue?

How was Abe assassinated? Abe was shot dead on July 8 by a gunman in the Nara region as he campaigned for his ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP).

His suspected murderer reportedly resigned from the Unification Church because his mother had made hefty donations to the sect, and believed Abe was linked to the group. A private funeral for Abe was held in Tokyo, attended by friends and family. Thousands lined the streets nearby to offer prayers and flowers. Japan has only held one other state funeral for a former prime minister in the post-war period, that of Shigeru Yoshida in 1967.

But Abe was Japan's longest-serving prime minister and the country's best-known politician, both at home and abroad. Prime Minister Fumio Kishida has said a state funeral will allow international leaders to offer condolences and show "Japan will not give in to violence".

The event is set for September 27 at Tokyo's storied Budokan venue, with US Vice President Kamala Harris and Australian Prime Minister Anthony Albanese among the leaders expected to attend.

What was the reaction? Controversy about the decision erupted quickly, with opposition politicians arguing Kishida was oversteering his powers by approving the funeral.

"He thought the cabinet has the right to decide on what kind of events it holds," Yoshiyuki Yamamoto, professor emeritus of international politics at the University of Tokyo, told AFP.

"But there is no formal system in Japan that defines state funerals. So what the opposition says is that his government has to seek parliamentary approval after debate."

Polls have shown opposition growing steadily. National broadcaster NHK found 38 per cent of respondents were against the plan in July, but by August that figure had grown to 57 per cent. Why are people opposed?

Yamamoto says the funeral has become controversial for two main reasons: "questions around Kishida's decision-making... (and) the issues around the Unification Church and its links to the LDP." After Abe's death, the LDP revealed deep-seated antipathy towards him. "He is seen as the nemesis" by some in Japan, said Kazuhisa Kawakami, a political psychology professor at Rikkyo University. "His state funeral is, in a way, used by his political foes as a weapon to galvanise their bases." Does cost play a role? The funeral will cost around 1.7 billion yen ($12 million), according to the government.

That is vastly more than the initial 250 million yen figure mooted by the government, which excluded costs for security and hosting foreign dignitaries.

"That didn't give a good impression in terms of transparency, either," said Yamamoto. Kishida has acknowledged the discontent about the funeral and answered questions during a televised special session of parliament, but polls show he has done little to move the needle.

However, with invitations also sent out about security operations under way, "cancellation is not an option," Yamamoto added.
